

Motta

design Jasper Morrison

A simple chat between Magis and designer Jasper Morrison. A meeting of old friends, after a break of several years, as if to rekindle the synergy established in 1993 with the famous bottle holder that sealed an everlasting creative bond.

Jasper Morrison cited “the Spaghetti Chair by Giandomenico Belotti, to design a lightweight chair with vertical legs and reduced bulk”, and with that in mind, he and the Magis team immediately got to work.

The result is Motta, a chair based around a simple steel tube frame, that maintains its elegance while also honouring the place of that meeting with its name – from Motta di Livenza, the original headquarters of Magis.

Motta features a steel tube frame, to which a seat and back in plastic, upholstery or wood can be attached. Created for the home, but also suitable for contract use, it is the ultimate chair for living and dining areas: non-stackable, to preserve the elegance and verticality of its frame, with a simplified system for attaching the seat and backrest, meaning every single component can be switched out, replaced or disposed of with ease.

Motta is minimal yet versatile, ready to change its attire for any occasion. The straight, slender legs, the clean, elegant cut, a rigour softened by a palette that coordinates frame, seat and backrest.

The collection also includes three tables featuring the same material for the frame and available in three different heights.
