Motta

design Jasper Morrison

A simple chat between Magis and designer Jasper Morrison. A meeting of old friends, after a break of several years, as if to rekindle the synergy established in 1993 that sealed an everlasting creative bond.

Morrison cited Giandomenico Belotti's Spaghetti Chair as a reference point for designing a lightweight chair with vertical legs and reduced bulk. From that shared intuition, the Magis team immediately set to work, giving life to Motta.

The chair takes shape from a simple steel tube frame, that maintains its elegance while also honouring the place of that meeting with its name – from Motta di Livenza, the original headquarters of Magis.

Motta is made of a steel tube frame and a seat and back in recycled polypropylene, upholstered or in wood. Designed for domestic use but is also perfectly suitable for contract use, it is the ideal chair for living and dining areas.

It stands out for its clean lines, vertical structure and versatile aesthetics, capable of blending harmoniously into different contexts.

The slender legs and essential cut are enhanced by a palette of four colours (red, green, blue and brown) that coordinates the frame, seat and backrest.

The collection is also complemented by a stool that inherits the chair's elegant and sturdy frame in steel tube, as well as its colours and finishes.

Available in two heights, it blends seamlessly into any setting and, thanks to the backrest support, ensures a perfect balance between stability and comfort.

The collection is also enriched by three low tables, available in three heights and featuring a steel tube frame in four colours and an oak veneered top.

Created with the aim of offering furniture that is visually light, durable yet compact, the Motta collection is designed to be versatile and adaptable, suitable for both domestic and commercial settings.
